Section 3: Segment 14

Topic 2. Cherish Correction

- Who in your life has the freedom to correct you? When did they last do so?

- Does it take them courage to say anything corrective to you? Ask them.

- Do those close to you find it difficult to communicate a differing view or opinion to you? Ask them.

- Do those close to you think you control others to get your way? Ask them.

- Do you find yourself busy with activity yet minimal in emotional intimacy with other people? Ask them.

- If your father or mother is still alive, ask them, "Is it a joy to have me as your child? Why?" What was their response?

- If you work under someone’s supervision, ask that person if you contribute positively to the interpersonal environment at your work place. What positive ways? What negative ways? How can you improve?

- If you’re married: Does your family consider you a warm, caring person? Ask them.

Hebrews 13:17 commands each of us: “Obey your leaders, and submit to them; for they keep watch over your souls, as those who will give an account.”

- From your vantage point, does the leadership in your faith community know you well enough to render account to God for you?

- If you’re personally known by the leadership, ask them, "Is it a joy to have me in this faith community?" Get feedback—Ask them "why". What was their response?

- Are you in a Nicolaitan religious system in which the leadership has little or no contact with you or doesn’t even know you at all? Then you’re hiding out from one of God’s valuable means for your development of Christ-likeness. Are YOU hiding out? Why?
